

“Excellent venue for meeting like minded operators and contractors.”

Gunther Newcombe, Vice President – Decommissioning, BP

“The conference is a great exchange of decommissioning technology and best practices that are much needed in this time of increasing decommissioning efforts resulting from the maturity of the Gulf of Mexico shelf and the post Katrina/Rita/Ike damages. I learned several valuable ideas that will improve how we do business in the future.”

Edgar Anderson, President, Maritech Resources

“Interesting & educational – professionally organised and executed.”

Cheryl Lansford, Consultant – Project Engineering, ExxonMobil

“I thought the conference was well organized and covered a nice variety of subject matter on decommissioning and salvage operations. I especially enjoyed the case studies by the Operators which gave me a closer look at how others managed their salvage risks.”

Mark Day, Senior Construction Engineering Advisor, Devon Energy

“Another smash hit! Despite very nervous market conditions, this years D&A Summit was very well attended, providing excellent market networking opportunities and highly relevant and informative presentations.”

Al Hise, Business Development Manager, NCS Subsea

“So much great information was available at the event. The conference opened my eyes to the magnitude of decommissioning business and its anticipated future.”

Pedram Honarpisheh, Engineer, Panhandle Energy

“Great forum. Very beneficial to see how others are handling decommissioning abandonment issues.”

David Bowman, Petroleum Engineer, Nexen Petroleum

“We at InterAct felt the 2010 Decommissioning & Abandonment Summit was well planned and an excellent forum for showcasing ideas and capabilities as well as providing an opportunity to discuss one of the least discussed and understood necessities of our business. By bringing together the key players, (e.g.; industry experts, regulators, service suppliers and end users), the conference participants enjoyed the unique opportunity of discussing, and better understanding, issues that are specific to these types of activities without having to sift through a myriad of non-specific exhibitors and unrelated presentations. We felt all of the presentations were succinct, relative, and very professionally delivered, and certainly piqued and kept the interest of the conference participants “

Tom Kennedy, President, InterAct

"The Decommissioning Community is not that large so anytime you can have the major players in the same place & at the same time - it becomes very cost effective."

Gary Demarsh, President, DEMEX International

"This is a great opportunity to meet & interact with people and companies that you may not know how to reach in the everyday world. This is especially true for small companies and new suppliers."

John Muller, Project Manager, Boh Bros Construction Co.

"A very well organised summit focusing exclusively on decommissioning and abandonment issues. The crowd was just the right size."

Mike Arellano, Meteorologist - Marine Industry Manager, ImpactWeather

"The conference was good in that it brought together regulatory issues, platform removal, well P&A and alternative platform uses."

Frank Buescher, Senior Vice President – Operations, Casabarin Engineering

"Great event. Enjoyed the real time experiences shared at the summit. Great opportunity to meet clients, peers and learn about the latest developments in decommissioning technology."

Paul Pollet, Construction Manager, EDG Consulting Services

"Educational and useful for future planning"

Rickey Giroir, Energy XXI

"Very focused with high level personnel"

Tom Cheatum, Sales & Marketing Manager, Versabar
